"FAVORITE REMEDY"
Recommended by Clergymen, Statesmen and Others.
SALT RHEUM.
Hon. J. H. Snyder, of Saugerties, N. Y., gratefully testifies to the ability of "Favorite Remedy" as exhibited in the case of his little daughter who was covered with Salt Rheum from head to foot. "Favorite Remedy," says this thankful father, "relieved my girl altogether from this fearful affliction, Salt Rheum. This occurred two years ago, and not a sign of the disease has since appeared. What it did for this child it will do for all who use it."
LIVER DISEASE.
Mr. J. H. Northrop, of Lansingburg, N. Y., for several years Captain of the Troy police, says: "I have been for a long time a great sufferer from derangement of the liver, and after using many of the medicines recommended for that complaint, Dr. Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" is the only one which gave me any relief. I firmly believe that the "Favorite Remedy" is a good, honest preparation; one that may be depended upon."
CHRONIC LIVER DISEASE.
Rev. J. G. Smith, of Hartford, Ct., says: "Being a great sufferer from Chronic Liver Disease and Indigestion, I at last tried your 'Favorite Remedy' and found immediate relief. I used two bottles, which worked wonders in my general system."

NEWS AND OTHER ITEMS.

New water works are demanded for New York.

To trade horses at Townsend, Schuyler County, N. Y., a license is required.

The steamship passenger lists for Europe are largely filled up for months ahead.

The immigration of Mormon converts is to be stopped by government interference.

The past Winter in Sweden has been one of the severest ever known in that country.

The coinage of the United States mints for April aggregates 6,054,100 pieces, valued at $11,258,900.

The business of the Supreme Court of the United States has increased 500 per cent. in the last twenty years.

There are less than 700 convicts in the Massachusetts State prison at Concord, a smaller number than for several years.

Upper Canada lumbermen say the present is a bad season for getting their logs to market, through want of water in the small streams.

A sturgeon was caught in the Connecticut river, at Windsor Locks, on Wednesday, which weighed 256 pounds. It measured eight feet in length.

Emigration from Ireland to America will give the English the land if not general satisfaction. But where will she recruit her armies in time of trouble?

Last week was noticeable for a larger run of shad in the North river, N. Y., than ever known before at the same time, certainly due to the stocking of the river with young shad by the State Commissioners.

During the Winter logging season last closed, it appears that enough trees have been felled in the States of Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota to produce the enormous amount of 6,279,950,000 feet of lumber. The Summer logging work it is estimated will add 1,150,000,000 feet more, so that the total product of the year will aggregate 7,429,950,000 feet. Now the census agents sent to survey the pineries of the Northwest have just reported that the whole quantity of pine timber standing in the three great lumber States above mentioned is only 81,650,000,000 feet, so that if the rate of destruction now going on is kept up only twelve years will elapse before the supply is exhausted; indeed, if the lumber operations continue to be extended in the ratio of the past few years, the end will come in ten years.

The use of oatmeal is largely on the increase in our large cities and towns, yet it is not so extensively consumed in this country as in many of the European countries. The grain is very rich in gluten and fat, and contains a good quantity of starch and sugar, being everywhere recognized as a valuable food. It cannot be vesiculated into bread, but it makes good cakes. In Scotland the finer variety of oatmeal is baked thin, but the coarser kind is made into thick cakes called bannocks. In Norway the common food of the peasantry is a thin cake called flad brod, which is made of ground oats, husk and all, mixed with potatoes, and baked on a griddle or frying pan. A very palatable dish is made in some parts of Scotland by toasting oatmeal before a bright fire, then mixing it with a little beef or mutton fat, and after seasoning it with pepper, salt, and onions chopped small, again toasting it. The common method of cooking it, however, in Scotland, is by stirring it with boiling water until it has the consistence of hasty pudding, and in this manner Scotch brose is made; but if more diluted and boiled for a longer time it makes porridge. In Ireland it is mixed with Indian meal, and then stirred into boiling water, thus making the mixture called stirabout. Whey and milk are often used instead of water, and the mixture should be well boiled, otherwise it is apt to produce flatulence.

AGRICULTURAL ITEMS.

Wheat in Georgia is in a flourishing condition.

It is estimated that the acreage in Winter wheat is four per cent. greater than last year.

Water is the only medium by which fertilizing matter can be carried from the soil to the plants.

Wisconsin reports from its southern section that Winter wheat will fall off nearly one-half by reason of the storms of the past Winter.

The toad destroys from twenty to thirty insects in an hour, and the mole is continually destroying grubs, larvæ, palmer worms and insects injurious to agriculture; no trace of vegetation is ever found in its stomach.

There is not the slightest evidence to show that any person was ever injured by eating hams or pork in a salted state or fresh pork when well cooked. All danger arising from trichinæ is in eating pork in a raw state.

Maryland peach growers have decided to let us have a few peaches at high cost this Fall. A fair crop the coming season is hoped for. It seems that one good bud out of five is all that is needed to make a good peach crop, and samples from several large orchards show five good buds out of eight. Nature has a bountiful way of providing a surplus of peach buds. The pear, apple and cherry trees of Maryland have not been seriously injured.

The Journal says nineteen couples were divorced at the last term of Waldo Co. S. J. Court.

To increase egg production, mark those hens in your flock remarkable for the size or the number of their eggs, and hatch these in preference for laying stock. Choose breeds which do not sit. Do not over-feed or fatten, and keep laying hens in an active hungry state. Do not, however, run into extremes and under-feed them. They must have plenty, and yet always be ready for food. Do not keep old hens; two years is the outside limit. Birds hatched, say in March, 1880, should, on an egg farm, be killed for table on the first signs of moult in Autumn, 1881. They are then reasonably young, fetching a good price, and will not be so valuable in 1882. Laying hens should not have too much soft, fattening food. Sound grain in variety is the best diet, and plenty of green food, also a supply of oyster shells or mortar rubbish.

STATE NEWS.

Androscoggin.

The Journal says: Next Tuesday morning, leaving Lewiston at 7:20 o'clock, on the regular M. C. train, the excursionists of the Ocean Park association will start for old Orchard. The selection and sale of lots will take place at 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon. The association owns 55 acres of land. Plans of the lots, with their number and apprised value, will be furnished to all, and purchasers will be furnished with tickets on which they will write the street and number of the lot selected, with their own name, and pass these tickets to the directors, who will order the treasurer to furnish a deed of the same. If two or more persons select the same lots, this fact will be announced, and the parties will bid for choice. The one who gives the most will have the lot. No person is expected to make public the lot selected, till the declaration to be made by the directors. A large number of Lewiston and Auburn Free Baptists will probably make this their summer home.

Cumberland.

Mayor Senter, of Portland, at a recent meeting of the City Council, expressed the opinion that the High School grade in that city is carried too high.

The differences between the Grand Trunk railroad authorities and their brakemen have been adjusted and no strike will occur, as anticipated. The freightmen's strike at Montreal is entirely local. It has not interfered with regular traffic.

The schooner Maud Muller, of Harpswell, landed in six days of last week, 34,000 large cod, stocking $700. A good week's work.

A house and barn on the edge of the village of Brunswick, owned by Capt. Whitmore and occupied by Mr. Joel Ward, was completely destroyed by fire early Monday forenoon of this week. Insured for $500. The fire started in the barn, supposed to have resulted from smoking on the premises.

Franklin.

The Press says that Dr. Dyer, of Farmington, is in Portland, managing a case in the circuit court, of Eben F. Pillsbury, of Boston, vs. the village corporation of Farmington. The doctor is acting as agent for Mr. Pillsbury. The case is this: In 1870 the corporation of Farmington issued $20,000 in bonds to build the Androscoggin railroad across the river to the village. In 1872 several citizens of Farmington prayed for an injunction against paying the coupons on the bonds. It was granted by Judge Walton. An appeal was then made to the full bench, and after six years the injunction was made perpetual by joint vote of that bench. The coupons have remained unpaid since that time. Mr. Pillsbury purchased $9,000 of these unpaid coupons. He now brings action before the circuit court to recover on the same.

Hancock.

The American says that S. B. Chilcott, of Sullivan, has a tame crow that left last fall when the cold weather came on, and after an absence of four months returned, and to all appearance had lost none of his domestic qualities. He takes food from the hand, and appears happy to be at home again. He brought a companion crow with him, and when given more food than he himself wants, he gives it to his friend. The friend, however, does not come very near the house.

Kennebec.

The Journal says that about a dozen men are now employed at the Augusta shoe factory, getting out sample lots of goods which can be manufactured in the building. There is a fair prospect that the factory, which has been lying idle so long, will soon be in full operation giving work to from sixty to one hundred shoe-makers.

Edward Burbank, driver of a gravel team, was fearfully bruised at Augusta, Wednesday, by the caving in of a pile of gravel. One of his horses was badly injured also.

Sagadahoc.

The Times says that the largest amount of business, with perhaps one or two exceptions, ever done in the probate court of Sagadahoc county, was done Wednesday by Judge Hall. Some $300,000 in one shape and another passed through his hands for judgment.

The hearing of the Leeman heirs vs. Sarah Ann Leeman, administratrix of Bath, which by assignment came up in Probate on Tuesday, for special hearing before Judge McKim, of Boston, terminated in the court granting the petition of the administratrix, and ordering a partial distribution of the intestate estate.

Somerset.

The Reporter says that the contracts for carrying the mails for the next four years have all been awarded. The Forks route goes to F. B. Heseltine; the route, Skowhegan to Mercer, to Samuel Whittier; the Canaan route to Mr. Lord; and the Athens route to outside parties.

York.

Old Orchard is to have a steamboat pier, and a rapid growth in the future is anticipated. It is predicted that within a few years Saco and Biddeford will unite; that Old Orchard will be annexed, and that together they will form the largest city in Maine.

THE WITHDRAWAL OF THE NEW YORK NOMINATIONS.

[From the Boston Journal.]

The action of the President in withdrawing all the New York nominations except that for Collector of the Port of New York indicates that he has concluded that the present is the best time to resist Senatorial "bossism," and to notify the Senate and the country that while he is the constitutionally elected President he will neither be trifled with nor deprived of his Constitutional authority.

Briefly stated, the case is this: The President made several nominations for Federal offices in New York. All of these were satisfactory to Senator Conkling except that of Judge Robertson. Consequently all of them except that of Judge Robertson he proposes to have confirmed. This single appointment, which is not to Mr. Conkling's liking, he proposes to lay aside indefinitely without permitting the Senate to vote upon the question of confirmation. If Senator Conkling can have his way, he will have only to say "I object" to prevent action upon the Robertson nomination. Seventy-five Senators may be prepared to vote upon confirmation, or a decided majority may be ready to vote for confirmation, yet under this unwritten law, which is called Senatorial courtesy, the one Senator, by objecting, can prevent action upon the nomination.

The President is evidently determined to resent this preposterous assumption, which practically ignores the Chief Magistrate and makes one Senator more potent than both President and Senate. He declares, in effect, that he has sent to the Senate such nominations as he deemed fit to be made. As Chief Magistrate he has a right to expect that the Senate will act upon them. If the men designated for offices are found unfit, the President expects the Senate to reject them; if otherwise, he has a right to demand immediate action. The Senate is in session for that special purpose, and not to sit in silence while this or that Senator, by simply objecting, can indefinitely postpone action upon any nomination.

The President has withdrawn the New York appointments which Mr. Conkling would approve in order that the Senate may be brought face to face with the nomination of Judge Robertson. If the Senate permits Mr. Conkling to have action postponed upon that nomination, no other nominations will be made for New York. If the Senate takes action upon the Robertson appointment the same nominations will be returned to the Senate. In either event the President notifies Mr. Conkling and all others interested that he will not be led into any false position where he will appear to surrender his functions to the Senatorial dictator. In other words, Mr. Garfield announces that he is President of the United States and that it is not his immediate purpose to abdicate.

There appears to be a feeling in Senatorial circles that a conflict between the President and Senator Conkling will be attended with disastrous results to the Republican party. We think these gentlemen are taking counsel of their fears. If Republican Senators will concern themselves less about displeasing Senator Conkling and will persuade themselves that the Republican organization has other aims than the aggrandizement of individuals, they will be in a better frame of mind to consider the question which Mr. Conkling has raised, namely whether he or General Garfield shall be President.

They may be assured of one thing; sensible Republicans are well-nigh disgusted because many Republican Senators are manifesting a desire to sacrifice so much of independence in order that Senator Conkling may have his way. They may also be assured that sensible Republicans are thoroughly disgusted with "bossism" as illustrated by the New York Senator. While timid Republicans will borrow no end of trouble because of the action of the President, we are confident, from the expressions that we heard last evening, that it meets with almost universal and cordial approval. "I'm glad Garfield is going to be President," was the remark of more than one Republican on reading of his withdrawal of the New York nominations.

If Republican Senators could see this matter in its true light, they would see that the only danger which threatens the Republican party is the success of that spirit of "bossism" which Senator Conkling's course illustrates.

THE DEADLOCK AND ITS LESSON.

[From the Philadelphia North American.]

Probably some may breathe more freely now that the Senate has resumed executive business. It is not good manners to grudge anybody free breathing. It is better to exhort such as breathe more freely to make the most of their opportunity. This "cruel" war is not over. It was not begun yesterday, last year, nor even fifty years ago. It antedates any living man. It has nothing of newness about it. It has come down to us from remote former generations of men. It is the conflict that began when the many revolted against the tyrannous exactions of the few, and has raged with occasional pauses ever since, not here alone, but everywhere among the progressive peoples.

The charlatans in politics may affect to regard this conflict as having no more important stakes than loaves and fishes. The gentlemen who hunger for the loaves and fishes may so regard it, and if they do, then they are in accord with the charlatans. The lesser and immediate is generally put forward at the head of the catalogue of reasons for waging any conflict. It was so in all the struggles entered into by our English ancestors. It was so in our own revolution, in the last war with England, in the Mexican war and in the war for the Union. In that later war it is true that the Union was in danger, but the real stake was the destiny of a hemisphere, in working out which the Union was and is simply an agency. That struggle was at first, on the one hand, a revolt against the rule of a majority, and on the other an effort to retain the power which the people had placed in their hands. But it was more than that in fact, as all intelligent men now know. The most important conflicts recorded in history have generally been over apparently minor issues.

It is now seemingly said that the individuals about whom the conflict in the Senate has raged are fading into insignificance. Individuals, except in rare instances, are always insignificant. But there can be no warfare without a large admixture of individualism. That is the law of conflict and the fundamental principle of philosophy of human progress. The individual always constitutes the rallying point, no matter how important the principle at stake may be. History affords no instance of a struggle for and against a great principle in which the individual was absent. So now we say what has been said unnumbered times in the past—that the majority must rule and the minority must submit. The fact that the Republicans barely hold the Senate by a constitutional majority has been seized upon by the heedless to palliate the revolutionary proceedings of the few. But a majority is a majority, whether it be of one or of ten thousand. To deny that is to lay the frame work of our system in ruins. A majority of one is declared by the organic law to be effective for every purpose to which a deliberative body can address itself. To deny its effectiveness is the first step to denying the right of any numerical majority to rule. As a majority of one is less than a majority of six, so a majority of six is less than a majority of sixty. Where will you draw the line? Where is the line drawn? It is drawn at the least possible numerical precedence by the clear and uncontroverted provision of the supreme law. And there it must be maintained, no matter what the heedless may clamor for.

PRESIDENT GARFIELD FIRM.

He Maintains His Constitutional Prerogatives,

And Refuses to Abdicate in Favor of Conkling.

[Wash. Cor. Boston Journal, May 5th.]

General Garfield has determined to be President of the United States, and he appears also to be determined that the attempt to practically change our form of government by depriving the Executive of power, began in Andrew Johnson's time, shall not now be continued under the name of "The courtesy of the Senate." The President, while recognizing the fact that the Constitution requires the advice and consent of the Senate with respect to the confirmation of certain officers, is disposed to maintain his constitutional prerogative of selecting the persons to be nominated. This is the interpretation which the intimate friends of the President put upon the message withdrawing all the New York nominations except that of Judge Robertson. It would seem that it was the final work of the Executive upon the question of the New York appointments. It was an act which amazed the Senate, and which certainly the celebrated committee of seven did not expect. It is not the kind of compromise that they have sought. Why it was done and what will come of it are the interesting topics of the day.

A FRUITLESS VISIT.

Early this morning Senator Platt of New York and Vice President Arthur went together to the White House. The purpose of their visit was to induce the President to withdraw all the New York nominations, that of Judge Robertson as well as those which subsequently were withdrawn. The conference is said to have lasted more than an hour. The President is known to have informed those gentlemen that he would not for a moment consider the proposition to withdraw the name of Robertson, although he did say that he was considering the withdrawal of some of the other names mentioned. These two gentlemen left without having accomplished their purpose. They had not been in their seats in the Senate an hour when the message came which so amazed the Senate, and which undoubtedly surprised the country. The President appears to have had this matter under consideration for some days. Last night some of his intimate friends suggested that something important was likely soon to happen. A New England Senator, who evidently had been taken into the President's confidence, said the same thing. Nevertheless to nearly all the Senate the message was a dramatic surprise.

HOW THE SENATORS FEEL ABOUT IT.

Those known as Administration Senators are not agreed in their opinion as to the propriety of the action. Some regret it, and say that the President has had rash advisers; that it is a challenge which ought not to have been given, and that it is not in the interest of harmony. It is undeniable that many Republicans who have not been disposed to take the part of Mr. Conkling in this fight do not approve of the President's action. They fear the consequences to party harmony. They say it is a direct affront to Senator Conkling, and one of them pronounced it an insult to the whole Senate. The latter theory of course is maintained under a strict construction of the Senatorial prerogative. They say the whole matter was in process of amicable adjustment, and that the defiance of the President was needless and will do great harm.

THE OTHER VIEW.

Others say it is the bold act which was needed to show that the Administration had a purpose and was determined to declare it. One Senator said that the message had a touch of Jackson about it, and that the American people would be glad to know that the President had assumed the aggressive and had invited a contest which it seemed must inevitably come. It was an assumption of responsibility that was justified; it was an act which had no doubtful meaning. The line was clearly drawn, the gauge of battle was thrown down; either the President or Mr. Conkling must triumph. That the President would triumph, this class of Senators said there could be no doubt, for they concede to Conkling but fifteen Republican votes and seven Democratic.

THE ADMINISTRATION SIDE OF THE CONTROVERSY.

Midnight. The following may be regarded as an authoritative statement of the Administration side of the new phase of the Robertson-Conkling matter: The action of the last Republican caucus made it plain that Senator Conkling was using his influence to bring about a final adjournment after the confirmation of all nominations in which he had an interest, and leaving Robertson hung up in his Commerce Committee, while there was to be another caucus over the contested nominations. The advantages were with Conkling. The exhibitions of his power in the caucus and the Senate have been too recent and too significant to leave much doubt of the result, should all the nominations except that of Judge Robertson be confirmed, a result which promised to be speedily reached. If this programme had been carried out, the situation, in so far as the administration was concerned would have been the most undesirable which its enemies could have planned. "The President," it would have been said, "ventured to assert himself in defiance of Mr. Conkling's will, and has failed to carry his point in any respect." When the purpose of Senator Conkling became manifest, by the action of the caucus in defining contested nominations, the President determined to take steps to protect his administration from discredit. From the outset he has intended to give conspicuous recognition to that element of the Republican party in New York of which Judge Robertson is the foremost representative. Having given ample assurances, by first nominating several Conkling men to important positions, that he bore no ill will to that Senator, he named Judge Robertson as a suitable recognition of the Independent Republicans. Now he withdraws the nominations of Mr. Conkling's friends, not, as is asserted by Mr. Conkling and his supporters to-night, as a challenge to that Senator, but so that in the event of the rejection of Robertson or the failure of the Senate to take any action, he may have the other important vacancies in New York with which to give recognition to the element which made his own nomination and election possible.

A FRESH SHOWER OF MUD.

[From the Philadelphia Ledger (Ind.)]

If Mr. President Garfield continues to crowd the "Star route" rascals there's a chance—before he gets through—that he will be accused of all the crimes of the decalogue, and some unknown to the ancient law-givers. The slander mill, the forgery mill, the perjury mill, are all threatening to get up steam, and the "Morey letter" will become a harmless piece of amusement, and rather commendable than otherwise, in comparison with what is to be ground out. But never mind; if James of the Post Office and James of the White House strike all the rascals with a heavy hand, the people will stand by them, regardless of the slander mills.

THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN BLAINE AND CONKLING.

[From the Cincinnati Commercial, (Rep.)]

Two nominations sent into the Senate by President Garfield for the purposes of conciliation are as offensive to Mr. Blaine as the nomination of Robertson can be to Conkling. We refer to those of the Marshal of Illinois and the Postmaster of Baltimore. Mr. Blaine is merely Secretary of State, and is not meddling, while it is claimed for Mr. Conkling that he is preeminent, and that his Primacy must be recognized or the Republican party must be ripped up.

THE NEW YORK COLLECTORSHIP.

The following special to the New York Times a few days ago, will be of interest now as giving the views of the Washington correspondent on the influences that have been at work in connection with the New York Collectorship matters:

In consequence of the determined attitude of Mr. Conkling, Republican Senators view the threatened contest with great apprehension, and are seeking some method by which a contest may be avoided. The committee have exhausted every effort to bring about an amicable and satisfactory settlement of this matter. Their efforts, however, have failed, and the question will be reported back to the caucus to-morrow without recommendation, leaving the caucus itself to deal with it. When before the committee, Mr. Conkling insisted that the nomination of Robertson should be rejected in the interest of the Republican Party of New York, and gave notice that he would use every effort to secure that result. He is reported to have threatened that he would, if it became necessary, carry the fight into the open Senate and arraign the President in the manner indicated in the Times dispatches of last night. This bold stand had some effect upon a number of Senators, who feared that such a contest would result disastrously to the Republican Party in New York in future elections, and many of them were debating whether it would not be better to reject Robertson than to invite such a fight.

To-day, however, there has been a visible stiffening up amid the timid Senators, and Mr. Conkling himself appeared to have undergone some change of feeling in regard to the bold stand previously taken. In his talks with Senators to-day he appealed for postponement until the regular session, and did not make a demand for Robertson's rejection at the present session. This is the point that will disturb the caucus to-morrow, and the lines are likely to be drawn on the question of considering the nomination of Judge Robertson at the present session and after the uncontested nominations are disposed of. If Mr. Conkling will be satisfied with postponement, it is probable the Republicans will accommodate him, for the reason that all desire to avoid a contest, and for the additional reason that it is believed Senator Platt and the President may be able to arrive at a satisfactory settlement of the difficulty after the final adjournment.

A Senator who is favorable to Robertson's confirmation said to-night that Mr. Conkling has gone too far in his opposition, and in doing so has assumed an attitude toward his colleagues that borders on the offensive. "He has assumed," said the Senator referred to, "to dictate to the President and to bully his colleagues into supporting him, by threatening to bring defeat and disaster to the Republican Party of New York unless he is permitted to have his own way. I don't think the Republicans of New York are so prostrate at Mr. Conkling's feet as he would have us believe, and some of us are inclined to the opinion that Mr. Conkling's defeat in this case would rather add to than take from the strength of the Republican Party of his State. Mr. Conkling seems to be laboring under the delusion that he is the Atlas that is holding the Republican Party of New York and the country on his shoulders, and that unless we honor him he will annihilate us. No one will be so bitterly disappointed as Mr. Conkling, should he attempt to execute his threats."

Another Senator said: "Mr. Conkling won't do much general damage should Robertson be confirmed. He would like to have him rejected at this session, but I think he knows that can't be accomplished and he is therefore really striving now to secure postponement. The success of that course would enable him to claim a victory over the President, and inasmuch as Robertson can be put in office during the recess I am inclined to favor the postponement rather than bring up a fight that might lead to some loss in the next political campaign."

A Senator who is a member of the caucus committee said that Mr. Conkling's speech made an impression on the committee at the time, but when they came to consider the entire question that impression was dissipated. Mr. Conkling would not do such rash things as he intimated. The Republican Party was more necessary to him than he was to it, and in a distinct issue between the President and any one Senator in the matter of a Federal appointment he believed it was the duty of Republican Senators to sustain the President.

One Senator thought the session was likely to be dissolved without doing anything beyond acting on the pending treaties. This would, in his judgment, avoid all annoying differences now threatened and enable the President to make necessary nominations during the recess.

FELLOWS' SYRUP

Its first apparent effect is to increase the appetite. It assists digestion, and causes the food to assimilate properly—thus the system is nourished. It also, by its tonic action on the digestive organs, induces more copious and regular evacuations. The rapidity with which patients take on flesh while under the influence of the Syrup, of itself indicates that no other preparation can be better adapted to help and nourish the constitution, and hence be more efficacious in all depression of spirits, shaking or trembling of the hands or body, cough, shortness of breath, or consumptive habit. The nerves and muscles become strengthened, and the blood purified.

The various kinds of waste or decay that affect the human body, though attended each with some symptom not common with the rest, agree very much in this, that the basis in all is nearly the same. It is generally conceded, that the majority of diseases are accompanied by faulty digestion; and such being the case, we must, in order to cure such diseases, cause the organs of digestion to perform their proper functions. No remedy has before been discovered which has so beneficial an influence on these organs as Fellows' Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites.

MAINE NEWS.

A NEW STEAMER

Launched at Maranacook.

Meeting of the Maine Soldiers and Sailors' Committee.

WINTHROP, May 6. Wagg & Lucas lauched their steamer Yosemite at Lake Maranocook this morning. She carries two hundred passengers. She will prove a great attraction at the lake this summer. A committee of the Maine Soldiers and Sailors' Association visited Lake Maranacook by special train this morning with a view to hold their annual reunion there. Among the party was ex-Gov. Chamberlain and Supt. Tucker. The committee were well pleased with the location and the reunion will probably be held there, though it is not fully decided.

Cleared for Liverpool.

PORTLAND, April 6. The steamer Toronto sailed for Liverpool at four o'clock this afternoon. She carried 250 cattle, 980 sheep and 1,119 quarters of fresh beef among her cargo.

FORTY-SEVENTH CONGRESS.

Special Session of the Senate.

WASHINGTON, May 6.

In the Senate this morning Mr. Dawes made an attempt to secure action on his resolution for the election of Senate officers, but the Democratic Senators resumed their tactics of alternating motions for Executive session and to adjourn, until at 12.45 Mr. Dawes gave up the fight for the day and upon his motion the Senate went into Executive session.

The Senate confirmed several nominations to-day, among them the following Postmasters: Geo. Hammond, Middlebury, Vt., and James H. Murdock, Woodstock, Vt.

The greater part of to-day's Executive session was occupied with discussion as to the advisability of removing the injunctions of secrecy from the previous proceedings in regard to the Chinese treaties. The subject was brought before the Senate by motion to authorize the publication of the written speech of Mr. Hoar. This was agreed to. Thereupon a resolution was offered to extend the same privilege to all other Senators, who discussed the treaties, but it was determined that this would be unfair to the Senators who had not prepared speeches, and that it would be wholly impracticable to recall from memory a large portion of the debate. The proposition to make all proceedings public was therefore voted down, and the Senate soon afterwards adjourned to Monday without a quorum pending the discussion of the motion to reconsider the vote by which the publication of Mr. Hoar's speech was to be authorized.

WASHINGTON.

Military Divisions.

WASHINGTON, May 6. An army order has been prepared restoring the military divisions to the same status as before the order of December, 1880, which created a division of the Gulf. By the new order Gen. Schofield is placed on waiting orders until further orders of the President, with full pay. The territory formerly embraced in the division of the Gulf, is restored to the division of Missouri, which will remain under command of Gen. Sheridan. The divisions of the Atlantic and Pacific will remain unchanged under the command respectively of Gens. Hancock and McDowell.

Indian Affairs.

A telegram to Secretary Lockwood announces that Hon. Hiram Price, who is in New York attending to the annual letting of contracts for Indian goods, had taken the oath of office as Commissioner of Indian Affairs, and Ezra L. Stevens was at once appointed chief clerk of the Indian Office, and during the absence of Mr. Price is acting Commissioner.

Personal.

Sir Edward Thornton discredits the report recently cabled from London that he is to be sent to St. Petersburg.

Owing to the present important juncture of affairs the President has been compelled to decline the invitation to attend the centennial celebration of the battle of the "Cowpens," Wednesday.

MICHIGAN.

Failure of a Grain Firm

DETROIT, May 6. Jacob Beeson & Co., one of the largest grain dealing firms connected with the Detroit Board of Trade, made an assignment this morning to D. M. Dickinson. The failure causes great surprise. The liabilities are not stated.

NEW YORK, May 6. At the reunion of the 3d Army Corps, last night, Gen. Viles, of Philadelphia, was elected President; Major Shreve, of Boston, Vice President; Gen. Mott, Treasurer, and Col. Welling, Secretary.

The Death Penalty.

ITHICA, May 6. The General Term, now in session here, to-day denied a new trial to Joseph Abbott, the twenty-years old murderer of a fellow prisoner in the Elmira reformatory, and re-sentenced him to be hung June 17th at Elmira.

Equitable Assurance Company.

The Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States made a proposition to Dr. Stephen H. Tyng, Jr., to visit Europe in connection with the organization of their foreign business having headquarters in Paris.

PENNSYLVANIA.

A Petition Asking for the Impeachment of Gov. Hoyt and Att'y General Palmer.

HARRISBURG, May 6. In the House of Representatives this morning a petition of the citizens of Lackawanna was presented, asking for the impeachment of Gov. Hoyt and Attorney General Palmer for their action in reference to the Judiciary of that county. An excited discussion followed on the adoption of the resolution, characterizing the petition as "impertinent, improper and scandalous;" that it should be returned and the proceedings expunged from the record.

NEW HAMPSHIRE.

Fears Entertained for the Safety of a Boating Party.

PORTSMOUTH, May 6. Grave fears are entertained in Kittery for the safety of Wentworth Currier, Messrs. Hutchings, and Spinney, of South Boston, natives of Kittery, who left Boston about eleven days ago in a sail-boat to visit relatives in Kittery, since which nothing has been heard from them. When the party started a strong northwest gale was blowing.

IOWA.

OTTUMWA, May 6. The wholesale drug and book house of J. L. Taylor & Co., and the First National Bank, were burned this morning, and the hardware house of Harper, Chambers & Co., damaged by the falling walls. They were in a dory four days and three nights. Fortunately they had a quart bottle of fresh water which saved their lives.

THE MONETARY CONFERENCE

Now in Session at Paris.

PARIS, May 6. The statement of the German delegate in the Monetary Conference yesterday was that Germany adheres to single gold standard only; that she is prepared to suspend the sales of silver for some years, resuming in a certain defined amount yearly to be agreed upon. She would agree to increase the quantity of marks in circulation possibly; also the quantity of silver per mark and to withdraw the five mark gold pieces.

The English delegates declared they attended the conference through deference to the States issuing invitations. They were ready to afford all information that might be asked of them, but would not vote on the proposals submitted. The Indian and Canadian delegates made similar statements. The Russian, Norway or Sweden, Swiss and Greek delegates, made reservations in regard to the acceptance of bi metallism.

The Austrian delegate pointed to his delicate position as representing a State having a forced paper currency.

The Spanish delegate proposed that the Conference adjourn after Saturday's sitting, in order that the members might ask instructions from their respective governments. This proposition will be considered to-morrow.

RHODE ISLAND.

The Sprague Estate Case.

A Small Pox Patient at Large.

JERSEY CITY, May 6. THE STAR ROUTE CONTRACTS.

Three Men Arrested in Philadelphia Charged with Defrauding the Government.

PHILADELPHIA, May 6. United States Commissioner Smith this afternoon issued warrants for the arrest of five persons, charged with having committed frauds upon the Government in connection with executing worthless bonds for the Star Route contracts. At 4 o'clock three had been arrested and were given a preliminary hearing. These were Wm. R. Cason, Jos. Funk and Joseph Blackman. The U. S. District Attorney, who represented the Government, produced no evidence, but gave briefly the charges against the defendants. Funk and Blackman are charged with being the principals in the bonds executed July, 1879, and Cason is charged with acting as surety, representing himself to be worth in each case $25,000. They are therefore charged with conspiracy to defraud the Government; also with perjury. The bonds are said to be fraudulent. The defendants were each placed under $5,000 bail for another hearing to-morrow.

LONDON, May 6. Earl Granville, Foreign Secretary, to-day said M. Barthelmy-St. Hilaire, French Minister of Foreign Affairs, yesterday requested Lord Lyons, British Ambassador at Paris, to assure us that France had no idea of the conquest or annexation of Tunis. We are not jealous of the French influence at Tunis, Earl Granville said, so long as it is exercised within the treaty rights, and without violence to the interest of British subjects. The Government will carefully watch any arrangement arising out of the operations and see that it does not clash with those rights.

A WOMAN DROWNED

FROM THE STEAMER KATAHDIN.

PROBABLY A CASE OF SUICIDE.

The Body Recovered.

The steamer Katahdin left Boston Thursday afternoon at half-past five and when off Baker's Island, distant about twenty miles from Boston, a woman was seen to fall overboard. Notice was immediately given at the pilot house, the steamer stopped, a boat was lowered, and pulled away to the resue. The woman was seen to fall from the saloon deck by four or more persons who were standing below on the guard, aft. These parties state that she struck the water feet first, and while in view laid on her back, with arms outstretched, making no struggle.

They also state that they heard no outcry from her as she fell, nor after she was in the water. As the steamer has a rail and netting three feet high, extending entirely around her, rendering it almost impossible for anyone, especially a lady, to fall overboard, this, in connection with her strangeness of conduct noticed by passenger previous to the occurrence, indicated that her fall was intentional and not accidental. This view of the affair was sustained by subsequent discoveries. In her pocket was found a crumpled card, on which was written with a pencil: "Will the purser please send this bag to T. E. Studley, 114 Williams street, New York?" Tied to a small hand bag, found in her state-room, was a piece of paper on which was pencilled: "Will the purser please send this bag to Mrs. M. J. Studley, Framingham, Mass?"

The alarm was given at the pilot house at ten minutes past seven and at twenty minutes of eight the body had been recovered and the steamer resumed her course. When it is understood that the woman was lost sight of entirely, after falling into the water, the promptness of action and efficiency of the officers in recovering the body will be appreciated. Efforts were at once made to resuscitate her, there was no lack of kind assistance rendered the officers, by passengers, both ladies and gentlemen, but all efforts were in vain. Life had probably left her body when she was taken on board. Had she delayed her action thirty minutes later, it would have been too dark to search for her.

Telegrams have been sent to both addresses mentioned, and the body left at Rockland, the agent of the steamer having instructions to prepare the body for burial, in case her friends should not appear.

The deceased was neatly but poorly clad and wore a plain gold ring on one finger bearing the inscription: "May, June"—being probably an abbreviation for Mary, as she gave the name of Mary Studley. It is thought that she was in the vicinity of forty years of age.

IDENTIFIED.

The following particulars were received from Rockland by Associated Press last evening:

The remains of the body who committed suicide on board the steamer Katahdin Thursday night have been identified as those of Mrs. Mary J. Studley, an M. D. by profession, and one of the faculty of the Normal School at Framingham, Mass. She was a native of Worcester and a very accomplished lady. Some three years ago she delivered a course of lectures here and at Thomaston upon hygiene. She has one brother in New York and one in Providence, the latter of whom will be here to-morrow. Gen. Cilley, who with his family were well acquainted and intimate friends of the deceased, has had the remains taken to his residence, awaiting the arrival of her brother. No cause can be assigned for the deed.

VISIT TO MARANACOOK.

Inspection of the Grounds by a Committee of Veterans—Probable that the Reunion will Occur at that Place.

In response to a courteous invitation extended by the Maine Central Railroad Company, a committee of the Maine Veterans' Association, accompanied by several prominent members of the Grand Army, visited Lake Maranacook yesterday for the purpose of looking over the grounds, with a view to the selection of this romantic spot, if deemed desirable, as the place at which to hold the grand reunion of the veterans of Maine some time in the latter part of August next. The delegations from the various parts of the State, arrived at the Lake about ten o'clock in the forenoon. Gen. Joseph S. Smith, Dr. A. C. Hamlin, Major W. Z. Clayton, and Paul R. Seavey comprised the party from this city. Among the prominent veterans from other places present at the meeting were Gen. Chamberlain, President State Association; Gen. Geo. L. Beal, chairman of the Executive Committee; Gen. H. S. Blanchard, Col. F. E. Heath and Dr. A. Crosby, of Waterville; Major Stevens, Hon Geo. W. Goulding, of West Waterville; Gen. John M. Brown, Major Chas. Walker, Adjt. Chas. W. Roberts, and Messrs. Harlan P. Ingalls, C. D. Starbird, Wm. H. Pennell, and Geo. M. Seiders, of Portland; Department Commander W. G. Haskell and J. N. Wood, of Lewiston, and Col. Henry S. Osgood, of Augusta. Among the railroad officials in the party were Supt. Payson Tucker, General Ticket Agent F. E. Boothby, Paymaster Shaw and Geo. Alden, Eastern Agent.

A description of Lake Maranacook and its surroundings has been given in these columns on a previous occasion. Naturally a most attractive retreat, its charms have been greatly enhanced by the Maine Central Railroad Company, whose track runs directly through the grounds, very near to the shore. To the stranger the place seems an enchanted spot, which once seen cannot be soon forgotten. The broad sheet of water, of a depth varying from six to one hundred and fifty feet, sparkling in the sunlight, and upon whose placid bosom are plying the steamers and innumerable boats belonging to the premises; the romantic beach, skirted all along with a plank walk; the numerous fanciful structures, the magnificent grove on the opposite side of the railroad track, the rugged rocks that rear their bald heads, together with the noble range of undulating hills which hem in the lake on the opposite side, combine to present a panorama of nature whose beauties are not easy to portray.

In addition to the splendid passenger platform, the boat house, and the covered dance payillion built last year, the Railroad Company are constructing and have nearly completed a two-story building 100 feet long by 30 feet wide, the first floor of which is fitted up as a dining room, capable of seating at the tables some four or five hundred. The upper story is being fitted up for sleeping apartments. A circular building of attractive appearance called the "coat-house" has also been built this season. A grand band stand of beautiful design and resting upon the water some distance from the shore is also nearing completion. The party spent a most enjoyable hour at this place, when, the rain beginning to fall, they took a train to Lewiston.

Soon after arriving at the station, Supt. Tucker, who had been indefatigable in his attentions, announced that dinner was waiting. The guests were ushered into the dining room where long tables groaned beneath the delicacies of the season. It was a superb banquet and reflected much credit upon the caterer, Mr. Murray. Nearly an hour having been spent in discussing the choicest viands, the Executive Committee met together to compare notes. It was deemed inadvisable to decide hastily, and the question as to where the reunion will be held is an open one, although there seemed but one expression among those present, and that was that Maranacook was the place of all others in Maine. It is thought that Portland and perhaps Lewiston would offer great inducements to have their cities chosen, but it is safe to say that Maranacook Lake and its beautiful groves will be the choice of the veterans of Maine.

The visiting party felt under obligations to Supt. Tucker and his associates, and a resolution was passed by the veterans thanking the Maine Central Railroad officials for the courtesies extended to them and for the bountiful and elegant dinner given them at the Lewiston Station.

At a little past two o'clock the eastern and western bound trains arrived, and the visitors to Maranacook were whirled homeward, much pleased with the experiences of the day.

CORINTH.

ISLE-AU-HAUT.

A Beautiful Summer Resort.

[Correspondence Journal and Courier.]

Of all the charming little islands lying off the Maine coast, Isle-au-Haut is by far the most charming. Mount Desert is grander and more varied in its scenery, but Isle-au-Haut, about thirty-five miles to the southwest of her famous sister isle, possesses an equally lovely, though far more quiet, type of scenery, whose admirers are by no means few. There are three highland regions on the Maine coast: Mount Desert, the highest; the Camden Hill range, the next highest, and Isle-au-Haut, after Mount Desert, the highest island lying off the coast. As one approaches the island, it seems to be enveloped in a purple mist or haze, which settles especially around the hilltop. This hill or mountain, as it is called, is about 900 feet in height. Its sides and summit are covered with a rich growth of shrubs and small trees, together with a vast quantity of strawberry vines and huckleberry and blackberry bushes. It may be this mountain growth that causes this apparent haze at a distance. At any rate it is peculiar to Isle-au-Haut alone.

The island is about six miles in length and three and a half miles in breadth. It lies farther out to sea than Mount Desert, but is from four to six hours nearer to Rockland, the terminus of the only neighboring railroad, than the latter. On the whole island there are only 272 souls, men, women and children. The chief occupation of these islanders is fishing and farming, such as it is; but farming on the Maine coast means farming almost on the barren rock. How those Maine farmers ever manage to eke a living out of the rock itself, apparently, is still an unsolved problem. But they do it, and make money beside. One town of perhaps fifty houses is all the island can boast of; and this town rejoices in the unique name of "The Thoroughfare." The inhabitants are very kind-hearted, hospitable and honest, content to live quietly from day to day "in that state of life in which it has pleased God to call them." A Sabbath-like stillness prevails over the island, broken only by the bleating of sheep and lowing of kine. Almost every one with whom you meet is solemn, even to the children. You rarely hear a joyous laugh. In the streets or by the roadside you see no children playing. Occasionally one may find a child amusing himself, all alone, in a very quiet and sober manner. As you go by he looks up in a solemn sort of surprise at seeing a stranger, but ventures no explanation, and soon settles down again to his work of playing, as quietly as before. No youth of twenty summers could be more serious or profound in his remarks than some of the boys of ten or twelve years of age with whom you may fall in at The Thoroughfare. I could scarcely credit my ears at some of the wise remarks of my little guide during our ascent of the mountain. Living the same "humdrum" life every day, seeing nothing new, and knowing only each other, it is no wonder these islanders are solemn. As a whole, I must say they are far more intelligent than many of their neighbors of surrounding isles.

So gradual is the ascent of the mountain that it appears to be less high at a distance than it really is, its height being only appreciated from the top. President Eliot of Harvard, in speaking of the view obtained from this height, declared it to be superb, especially at sunset. This gentleman, who has been all through the Maine islands, is warm in his praises of this enchanting isle. Unlike the hills on Mount Desert, the mountain on Isle-au-Haut is not at all abrupt in any portion. It rises gently from the sea at the southern end of the island, and, reaching its highest elevation near the middle, slopes as gently into the sea at the northern end. It reminds one of an enormous backbone, with a depression in the middle; this the natives call The Notch. Unfortunately, a large fire last summer destroyed a portion of the mountain growth. However, so rapidly does the Maine forest spring up that in two more summers the hills will again be covered.

Strange to say, this antiquated village of The Thoroughfare boasts of an unusually fine dance-hall with all the modern improvements. It is reported to have one of the best floors in the State of Maine. This building was erected by the now defunct "Isle-au-Haut Improvement Company," headed by Colonel Montgomery, a fiery southerner.

In religious persuasion the islanders are mainly Congregational, and meet for worship in a small wooden church at The Thoroughfare. This church, the only one on the island, for some mysterious and extraordinary reason, has on its spire a large model of an exceedingly curious fish.

On going along the eastern shores of the island,—Thoroughfare is on the northwestern shore—the traveler follows a very picturesque road, passable only to the strong and unwieldy ox-cart, and too rough for horse and carriage. By the way, there is not a single horse on the whole island; and some of the islanders never saw one! This road leads through a very barren and rocky portion of the island, the ground near the shores being strewn with great stones, as though cast there by some giant hand. Suddenly the traveler stops in wonder and delight. Below him, in a lovely vale, lies a most exquisite little sheet of water. On either side of this rise high hills covered with verdure. Involuntarily this verse suggests itself to his mind:

> I know an isle where far away
> There lies a quiet lake,
> Embosomed in the peaceful hills;
> Naught doth the stillness break,
> Save when the ripples wash the shore,
> Or lap the stony crags;
> Or when the wild duck leaves her haunts
> Amid the reeds and flags.

Crystal Lake, for such is its name, is a little over a mile in length and half a mile in breadth, and is fed entirely by springs. One curious feature about the lake is that its surface is only ten feet above high-water mark, while its depth is from fifty to sixty feet below the same, and yet it is situated only forty rods from the sea. Its waters are of crystal clearness and so pure that no slime or filth of any kind ever collects in them. Around the northern shores of the lake runs a charming beach of shining sand which shelves off gradually into the cool waters. So clear is the ice of Crystal Lake that a newspaper can be read through twenty-two inches of it. The Knickerbocker Ice company, of Philadelphia, lately shipped a cargo of this ice to New York, where it was spoken of as the best in the market.

During the summer and autumn great flocks of wild fowl feed in the southern waters of the lake. Oftentimes one can see a flock of from six to nine hundred of them feeding. Foxes formerly abounded, but so destructive were they to the sheep, which roam at will over the island, that the islanders have nearly exterminated those cunning animals.

Your correspondent was unable to visit the extreme southern portion of the Isle-au-Haut, but President Eliot told him that he had seen the prettiest portions. Duck Harbor, which I was unable to visit, is said to be very unsafe to one unacquainted with its channels. President Eliot, in navigating its waters, had several very narrow escapes from being overturned by hidden reefs. Navigation among the Maine islands is, in fact, a dangerous task. Last summer several yachts bound for Mount Desert were obliged to turn back on their course, not daring to attempt a passage through the islands without a pilot.

The glorious air of Maine is too well known to need praising. Suffice it to say that the atmosphere of Isle-au-Haut is fully equal, if not superior, to that of Mount Desert. It is a self-evident fact that the Maine sea coast is destined to be the great center of future Atlantic summer resorts, most prominent among which will shine Mount Desert, of course, for, everything taken into consideration, that is virtually incomparable; but Isle-au-Haut will rank next, attracting such tourists as seek a quiet and beautiful summer home and desire to avoid fashion and great expense. The fashionable world will stream towards Bar Harbor, but none the less will Isle-au-Haut retain its devotees.

ALSOP LEFFINGWELL.

East Maine Methodist Episcopal Conference.

The above conference, which meets at Belfast on Wednesday next, is the annual gathering of the Methodist ministers of Eastern Maine, and will be the 34th session of that body.

There are on the roll of the conference 109 ministers, including 2 chaplains in the U. S. Navy, 17 supernumeraries and superannuates, and 26 on trial. Eight missionaries to South America are among those on trial. There are within the bounds of the conference 100 churches and circuits having pastors and three presiding elder districts. Twenty-one of the churches and circuits are supplied by local preachers, of whom there are 65 in the conference. There are about 10,000 members of the church.

Bishop Wm. L. Harris, D. D., LL. D., will preside. He was for a number of years a Professor in Ohio Wesleyan University, afterwards for many years he was one of the general secretaries of the missionary society, which position he held when he was elected Bishop nine years ago.

There will be a number of changes of the ministers in this vicinity—among them Mr. Townsend of Brewer, Jewell of Guilford, Besse of Bucksport, Southard of Hampden, whose terms expire by limitation, and Rich of Orono, who goes by transfer to Connecticut.

RESCUED FROM DEATH.

William J. Coughlin of Somerville, Mass., says: In the fall of 1876 I was taken with BLEEDING OF THE LUNGS followed by a severe cough. I lost my appetite and flesh, and was confined to my bed. In 1877 I was admitted to the Hospital. The doctors said I had a hole in my lung as big as a half dollar. At one time a report went around that I was dead. I gave up hope, but a friend told me of DR. WILLIAM HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS. I got a bottle, when to my surprise, I commenced to feel better, and to-day I feel better than for three years past.

"I write this hoping every one afflicted with Diseased Lungs will take DR. WILLIAM HALL'S BALSAM, and be convinced that CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED. I can positively say it has done more good than all the other medicines I have taken since my sickness. d1t&w no3 mar12

NATURE'S SLUICE-WAY.

The kidneys are nature's sluice-way to wash out the debris of our constantly changing bodies. If they do not work properly the trouble is felt everywhere. Then be wise and as soon as you see signs of disorder get a package of Kidney-Wort and take it faithfully. It will clean the sluice-way of sand, gravel or slime and purify the whole system. Druggists sell it, both liquid and dry, and it is equally efficient in either form.—Independent.

WHY ARE YOU BILIOUS?

Because you have allowed your bowels to become costive, and liver torpid. Use Kidney-Wort to produce a free state of the bowels, and it will stimulate the liver to proper action, cleanse the skin of its yellowness, cure bilious headache, and cause new life in the blood. Druggists have it, both dry and liquid.—Zion's Herald.

Fellows' Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites is not only the most reliable remedy for Consumption, but it is a specific also for Bronchitis and Asthma. 1w may5

"To sum it up, six long years of bed-ridden sickness, costing $200 per year, total $1,200—all of this expense was stopped by three bottles of Hop Bitters, taken by my wife. THE COST OF IT.

If the total cost of sickness simply in its business aspects were reckoned up, it would be found to be great enough in five years to pay the national debt. The merchant has a headache, from a fit of indigestion, and misses a good bargain. The lawyer does the same with a case. To say nothing about doctors' fees, etc., it don't pay to be even a little sick. Dr. David Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" is a friend of the business man, for it clears his brain. GRATEFUL WOMEN.

None receive so much benefit, and none are so profoundly grateful and show such an interest in recommending Hop Bitters as women. It is the only remedy peculiarly adapted to the many ills the sex is almost universally subject to. Chills and fever, indigestion or deranged liver, constant or periodical sick headaches, weakness in the back or kidneys, pain in the shoulders and different parts of the body, a feeling of lassitude and despondency, are all readily removed by these Bitters.—Courant.

THE HUMAN HAIR.

HOW TO PRESERVE AND BEAUTIFY IT.

Many persons abuse this delicate and beautiful ornament by burning it with alcoholic washes and plastering it with grease, which has no affinity for the skin, and is not absorbed. BURNETT'S COCOAINE, a compound of Cocoanut oil, etc., is unrivalled as a dressing for the hair—is readily absorbed, and is peculiarly adapted to its various conditions, preventing its falling off and promoting its healthy growth.

Housekeepers should insist upon obtaining BURNETT'S FLAVORING EXTRACTS, for they are the best. TuTS&w4wapr21

DON'T BE SILLY.

Don't let a foolish prejudice against popular medicines stand between you and the health of your wife, child, or baby. It is always right to advertise a blessing. Dr. Kennedy's "Favorite Remedy" is a blessing. It has saved thousands, and it will help you. If you are sick and miserable, we advise you to spend One Dollar for this King of Medicines, and then write to the Doctor at Rondout, N. Y., as to how you feel. SOMETIME.

BY P. THOMAS, M D

Oh! the isle of Sometime lieth
In the future's silver sea,
Thither hope, the seraph, saileth
With the pearls of destiny.
There our bark of promise taileth,
Weighing anchor near the shore;
There the south-west wind prevaileth,
Breathing balm forever more.

There the passion flower unsprings eth,
And the saintly lilies bloom,
There the lark and the sweet songbirds,
Mingling music with perfume,
There the rainbow that arcs o'er seas,
In a thousand glorious beams,
There the precious words are spoken
That the angels speak in dreams

There the heart that sorrow breaketh,
Finds a balm for every pain,
And our buried love awaketh
Into light and life again,
There the truth that could not perish
By the falsehood here below,
Is revived, to shine and flourish
As in ages long ago.

Oh! the Isle of Sometime lieth
In the future's mystic sea,
And my longing spirit crieth
For its solace constantly.
I have hoped and prayed and waited,
For my bark to reach its shore,
Where my heart reanimated
May be happy, as of yore.

A RAILWAY INCIDENT.

"Little fire grows great with little wind."
—Shakespeare

The steam gurgled and whistled, and arose in great hot, white jets through the wintry morning air. The bright brass bell of the locomotive swayed to and fro, ringing accurately as the early express jarred and rumbled out of the station.

Every seat of the car I had just entered was occupied; and feeling most uncomfortably conspicuous, I awkwardly stood beside the door that had just slammed unceremoniously behind me.

"Poor thing!" Decently she look interesteating in that silver-gray travelling dress! How slim and tall she is, and how pretty and pale" remarked some one half-way down the coach

"I think she looks decidedly ghostly and commonplace," dissented some other. "I never admired that pale hair tint of blonde hair. It is certainly neither yellow nor golden. Her gray eyes are rather handsome—or would be if they were not quite so owlishly big and alert, and her skin is really too fair. Such very fair complexions do not wear well; they wrinkle quickly and redden too easily. And most blushes are so affected or countrified. But positively, I believe her headgear is an affectation also. Is not her bonnet quite a caricature?—huge, immensely flaring, silver-gray plush—and smoke-gray, most enormous plumes. Will no one ever give her a seat? It really makes my nerves to see her pacing there in that spectral, Quakerishly, unadorned gray she eternally effects."

"I always thought Lulcen Aymes quite ingenuous," observed the other interlocutor, "and I am sure most people think her very graceful and lovely, and elegant and amiable. However, you do not seem to appreciate her excellences, very much, Clara."

"I cannot appreciate what I cannot discern," asserted Cara, with a half sneer that did not dignify her small, dark prettiness.

Her companion smiled a politely lenient disapproval, and in more suppressed tones, returned: "You have always disliked Luleen. And I have often almost believed that some significant speech of yours was the cause of her sudden estrangement from Larry Murray. Is it possible you said anything silly or meddlesome?"

"Oh, I dare say there are people sufficiently proper and stupid to consider me a very silly intermeddler indeed," Cara lightly responded However, I only kindly informed the gentleman of a few simple truths; and he was good enough to thank me."

"I fancy your way of speaking of a simple truth would not always encourage one to descend to the bottom of a well to find it," commented the elder lady, still speaking with the look and voice of courteous disapprobation. "Poor, dear, pretty Luleen!" she proceeded. "Have you observed how very white she is? how very distressed she seems? She must have been a passenger in that wrecked coach, and was sadly frightened no doubt. I am sure it must be quite dreadful for a lady traveling unattended to happen in an accident, but to be all alone in such peril, and deaf and dumb too, is really something appalling."

I knew both the speakers who had been discussing my person and my reputation, my faults and my misfortunes. But they little guessed I had heard their incautious, and not particularly delicate and sympathetic, comments and speculations. They little guessed that I was no longer deaf and dumb—no longer tongueless in a soundless world. They little guessed that the casualty they had mentioned in their flippant chatter had been ordained to restore me divers lost blessings.

But for a moment I forgot my amiable commentators. I forgot even my unpicasant postures—somewhat shaky perpendicular. And I certainly did not remember the sorry solace of seeing quite a little company in the misery of seatlessness and endangered equilibrium, for with unseeing eyes I was gazing through the coach window upon the kaleidoscopic fragment of world through which the train was darting like a great, fierce, black serpent with its hissing of steam, and rattle and glitter of iron and steel, while I was thinking very intently of many things.

I thought of the accident that had happened scarcely two hours before. I had been half dozing in my seat when a thick, terrible kind of black and blinding smoke darkened the air, when I was conscious of a strange jolting succeeded by a dreadful crash. In that hour of fright I regained my voice and hearing. I cried aloud, and heard the shrieks of those around me. I heard the stentorian announcement that rang cheerfully through the wrecked coach: "Nobody is hurt;" and my lips as well as my heart responded "God is good."

I thought, too, of the first time I met Larry Murray. The day of that meeting was very beautiful and happy. A garden party had gathered on a fine old lawn, where the trees were tall and ancient and full of tuneful birds—where delicate, reposed shadows moved in sunlight and moonlight over the velvety, odorous grass —where one could see delightful fountains and great plots of brilliant flowers, and far away a glimpse of the turquoise blue of a pretty little valley lake. There were dancing and an orchestra in a gilded Moorish pavilion, and a picturesque tangle of exotic palms, and a wild waltz was ending when some one brought him to me. Love, that mysterious and puissant sentiment, must have mutually inveigled us in that first moment. His dark eyes, pleased and wondering, turned toward me a lingering, questioning gaze, before which I trembled and blushed without comprehending why. We danced and dined, and sang and supped together, and in a week were betrothed. Our betrothal, however, was not unwisely hasty. His parents and mine had been friends, and society recognized him as a man of wealth and worth and much professional distinction. And that our affection was real and leal, we both knew. Nevertheless, that glad, sweet summer ended in grief and anger. Suddenly Larry seemed oddly changed. He was still devoted—too punctilliously so, I fancied—but the dear, spontaneous tenderness had gone from his manner, and at times he would watch me with a gloomy, inquisitorial gaze that could haunt me for days with an agony of disquieting speculation.

And sometimes he would speak vaguely, in a cynical sort of way, as if he doubted the unselfishness of all humanity, and my own fealty to him most of all. I was proud and I was loyal, and his ambiguous denunciations pained and angered me, and finally became no longer endurable. And so, one day, when one of his inexplicably churlish moods had become insufferable, I ended our pleasant dream by a quiet little homily of resentment that I tried to make as dignified as possible.

"Larry," I began with commendable calmness, though my wild tears were rioting unseen, "latterly I have fancied that you regard our engagement as a misfortune to yourself. I cannot conjecture why. I have fancied, too, that you suspect me guilty of some grievous fault or wrong, and that I am not quite worthy of your love, that I am sure despite that melancholo mystery, is mine. Yet I am not brave enough," I went on, hotly, "to tell me what you suspect. You are not manly enough to explain the strange and cruel hints with which you have outraged my pride and grieved my affection for weeks. And so, Larry, although I love and honor you as I never loved and honored any other, I believe I am acting rightly in giving you free. I shall be gratified if you will consider yourself no longer betrothed to me."

With the concluding sentence I left him alone, conscious that his dark eyes were regarding me with as much anguish as astonishment. I did not see him again. The next morning he left the place, and then came my terrible illness which for weeks I lay delirious at the doors of death, to be thrust back at last deaf and dumb, into a life that must be lonely and loveless evermore. And yet, even on this day of catastrophe, heaven had been kind to me. I was no longer mute. I could once more hear the sweet sound of voices and all the noises of the busy, perplexing world, of which in my youth and health I could not be quite weary.

I was still staring—with stupid resignation it must have seemed to observers, no doubt—through the coach window, when the train stopped, and after a happy exit of superfluous occupants some one offered me a seat.

I was more amused than annoyed when I observed that this seat was directly behind that of my chatty acquaintances, who greeted me as surprisedly as if they had supposed me a permanent inhabitant of the Antipodes until that particular moment, and I favored them with a smile much more brilliant than it would have been, I imagine, had I not heard their interesting and momentous dialogue.

My seat was not entirely vacant. Indeed, I found small room to place my slim form and Quakerish skirts quite comfortably and neatly in the little space beside the aisle, that was no more fastidiously clean than one usually finds that of an ordinary coach to be.

A gentleman occupied the place by the open window—a gentleman of goodly weight and proportions, evidently who from his aristocratically small ears to his shapely, polished boots, was wrapped in a great rich brown ulster, and whose visage was completely concealed by the black folds.
